The sound of a needle
dropped on vinyl

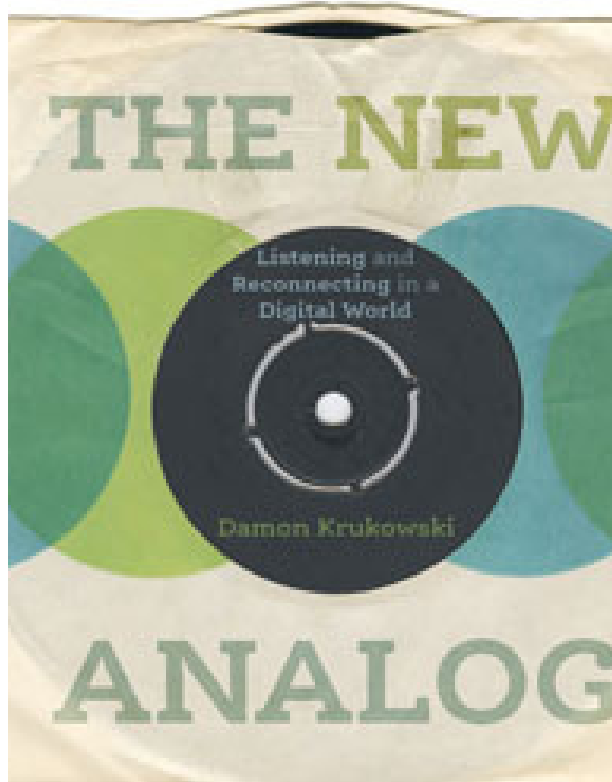

The first record I made was all analog. It wasn't a choice—that's just how it was done in the 80s. My friends and I lived in an all-analog world. There were no computers in our lives.

NASA Apollo Mission Control, from
Johnson Space Center, Houston, 1968

That didn't feel weird—it would have been weird if there had been. At the time, computers were something you saw on TV during a moonshot—you saw people sitting at computers at NASA mission control.

[SFX: Apollo launch]

Making a record wasn't anything like a moonshot. It didn't use numbers. It didn't use data.
